

To whom it may concern,

I signed onto the do not call list before it was adopted. Since it's adoption I have received approxiametely 6 calls total. Prior to it's adoption I was receiving a minimum of 6 calls daily. My quality of life has improved dramatically and I feel that there is no longer anyone allowed to violate my home. I never understood that if I called someone repetitively it would be considered harassment and I would be in violation of the law and subject to all penalties of its enforcement. Why would unsolicited salespersons NOT be subject to the same law of the land? Do not change the law...it upholds the same rules that private citizens must abide by and discontinues a legal form of harassment.

Thank you for your time,

Jayne L. Carr